COOKIES AND BARS – Description

Drop Cookies: are made from soft dough, dropped by a teaspoon on a lightly greased cookie sheet and baked quickly.

Molded Cookies: are made from stiff dough, rolled with the hand into balls or long pencil-thick rolls' then flattened or shaped as directed in recipe before baking.

Pressed Cookies: are made of dough that is slightly stiffer than drop cookie dough, but pliable. It is soft enough to be forced through a cookie press, or a bag with a decorated tip and hold the shape of the cookie.

Refrigerator Cookies: are made from stiff, rich dough. They are shaped into a long think roll, chilled and kept in the refrigerator ready to be slicked, evenly about 1/8 inch thick, with a sharp knife and baked as needed.

Rolled Cookies: are made from dough stiff enough to roll thin with a rolling pin. Before baking they are cut into the desired shapes with a floured cookie cutter.
